

Living and Working in Japan

Consulting services for foreign companies looking to set up shop in Japan, schools that provide special language instruction to students from international families, hospitals that make life easy for foreign patients... Internationalization is gathering pace in Japan, and measures to foster and support it are steadily being put in place. In this month's issue, we look at how Japanese society and business, as well as foreign workers and international families, are benefitting from the range of initiatives being implemented in Japan in the age of globalization.
